To Whom It May Concern:

A sensitive issue in the life of a Jew is what to do when, G-d forbid, a close relative passes away and there is a desire to honor the deceased through proper mourning according to Jewish laws and custom.

In order to help such Jews an outstanding graduate of our yeshiva, David Kotlyar, has developed a "Jewish Mourning Guide" on the Internet which supplies the needed information in a form which is easily understood and applicable. He has received the approval of renowned halachic authorities for the content of this valuable guide and has gained their encouragement for providing and expanding this service to Jews throughout the world.
